CityMapper

Free with: Android and iPhone

The ultimate transit app for complex cities! A to B trip planning with ETA including all modes (subway, bus, rail, ferry, bike/car sharing, Uber). Real-time departures. Transit maps. Line status and real-time disruption alerts. Uber integration. Bike routing and live bike share info. Constant updates. Everything you need -- and may not even realize you need -- to manage your life in the city. Also available on the web at: <https://citymapper.com/nyc> (citymapper.com)

Weekender

Free with: Android and iPhone

Construction in NYC is constantly occurring. This work often interrupts normal transit services in all of the boroughs. Sometimes Google Maps does not register weekend changes in service. We recommend Weekender to ensure that you don't step onto a train to suddenly discover that it skips ten stops and goes straight to Queens! There are also usually signs posted in the subway stations that alert passengers to scheduled service changes. Of course, changes in service can occur at any time due to emergency situations, inclement weather, and passenger interruptions. Be sure to stay alert and listen to any announcements made by your conductor. Also available on the web at: <http://web.mta.info/weekender.html>

MTA Bus Time App

Free with: Android and iPhone

View a real-time map showing where buses are in motion along the route. Search your bus by bus stop, intersection or route. Save your preferences by bus stop name, bus stop i.d., intersection or route. Find nearby stops and routes with one click on the map. Get time-based predictions of how long it will be until the next bus arrives at your stop. Also available through the web at www.mta.info/bustime . (www.mta.info)

Citi Bike

The Citi Bike App works in conjunction with New York's city-wide bike sharing program. During the muggy summer months where biking is permissible, the app functions as a catalyst to get you riding. Based on the user's location, the app showcases a map of nearby Citi Bike stations and directions on how to get to them. The app also lists the number of bikes available at each station as they are checked in and out, as well as the number of empty spaces where riders can drop their bikes. (builtinnyc.com)

Waze (for drivers)

Free with: Android and iPhone

Waze was an overnight success, and has become a cult favorite among commuters in the know, with good reason. By using inputs from other drivers in the area and around the world, it crowd-sources traffic updates, road hazards, detours, speed cameras, and even police officers lurking behind the nearest sight-line obstruction. Users can get detailed too, with the ability to make notes and post photos to be clearer about what lies on the road ahead.

ParkMe

Free with: Android and iPhone

Locates nearby metered street and garage parking spots. You probably don't own a car, nor do you desire to do so unless your gains in wealth exceed your ability to spend said wealth on brunch. But, if on the weekend you rent a car for your summer share with 25 of your least annoying acquaintances, chances are you will search for free street parking for a frustrating amount of time and realize you are going to have to spring for a spot. This makes that part infinitely easier. Also available on the web at: <https://www.parkme.com/new-york-city-parking> (thrillist.com)

Uber, Lyft, Juno, or Gett

Free with: Android and iPhone

All of these car service apps are supported in NYC. Each one has its perks and drawbacks, so we suggest exploring a few to see which app fits your needs. While taxis are an abundant, convenient, and safe mode of transportation in NYC, car services have been growing in popularity due to their GPS navigation capabilities and the convenience and safety of being picked up right in front of your doorstep. Most car services cost around the same price as a taxi unless surge pricing is in effect, which often happens during rush hour or inclement weather.

Food and Drinks

Foursquare

Free with Android and iPhone

Foursquare is a technology company that uses location intelligence to build meaningful consumer experiences and business solutions. The Foursquare City Guide app helps you discover new places, with recommendations from a community you trust. Find a better experience, anywhere in the world. Also available on the web at: <https://foursquare.com/> (foursquare.com)

Happy Hour

Free with: Android and iPhone

Happy Hour is based on convenient drinking, Happy Hour lets users know which of the various bars in New York which currently has their happy hour including a list of the drinks that are served. Extremely simple to use, all that is required of the user is to open the Happy Hour app, check-in to the bar, and then click on the “start” button to get discounted beverages. As alcohol is often overpriced during regular operating hours, this app is perfect for those who are looking for discounted drinks in New York. (appolicious.com)

The Infatuation

Free with: Android and iPhone

The Infatuation is a website, newsletter, mobile app, instagram network, and text message recommendation service started in 2009 by two guys who wanted to help their friends find not only great restaurants, but the right restaurant to suit their needs on a particular evening. And that’s still what The Infatuation is built on today. We strive to write restaurant guides and reviews that are both entertaining and useful, so that you can find a spot that’s “Perfect For” whatever you need, be it Date Night or Late Night Eats. The only difference is that these days there are few more of us on the team, and we have a whole lot more friends. Also available on the web at: <https://www.theinfatuation.com/> (theinfatuation.com)

Open Table

Free with: Android and iPhone

Many trendy and/or high end restaurants use Open Table for reservation scheduling. Getting a reservation at the more popular restaurants in NYC can be tricky, and Open Table makes it easy to grab an available time slot. It also sends you reservation reminders with contact information for the restaurant should you need to reschedule. Also available on the web at: <https://www.opentable.com/start/home>
