The ALD meeting (April 28, 2007) at the annual conference in Atlanta included a vigorous discussion regarding the continued existence of the Division. The enthusiastic consensus was that we are a large, viable and productive group whose goals (which are consistent with those of ARLIS/NA) are best met by remaining a division.

Post-conference email discussions resulted in the development and proposal of several sessions for the 2008 Denver conference.

Over the course of the next few months, Rijn Templeton solicited the ARLIS/NA membership for recommendations of titles to be added to JSTOR. In late August, 3 lists were submitted to Barbara Rockenbach: 1) journals recommended for addition (including the number of recommendations per title); 2) suggestions for non-journal digitization additions; and 3) names of participating librarians.

Use of ARLIS-ALD (developed by Greg Hatch and Lucie Stylianopoulos) continued, although at a lesser volume than last year.
